Narrative:
Damaged Property - Purple Octopus being displayed in the Library

On today's date and time, R/o received a phone call from complainant, Library staff, that she had discovered one of the art displays had been damaged.

Upon arrival complainant directed R/o to the western portion of the library to an end display where an octopus sculpture had been on display. Complainant stated that she had just now discovered that the sculpture had one of its tentacles broken off and the pieces (3) were then placed back onto the display top.

R/o would note that whoever caused the damage took time to pick up the pieces and place them back onto the display case. The pieces would have fallen to the floor when they were broken off.
