Officer was called to HR's office to speak with complainant. Upon arrival I found complainant and other subject talking with the HR Director. Complainant was crying and was very upset. She advised me that her ex-boyfriend (suspect) had seen her in the main hallway of A building and had said "Happy belated birthday" and he had then laughed at her. She advised that it was him laughing that had caused her to stress. She also advised that she had attempted to obtain the PPO mentioned in the original complaint follow up report from 09/24/15, but the court had refused it. I located suspect and he advised that he did wish her a happy birthday and that he may have laughed, but if he did it was not meant to be mean or intimidating.

I advised suspect to avoid and refrain from any conversations with complainant and other subject and I advised complainant and other subject to do the same with suspect. All three subjects stated that they would comply with that advice.
