Students can choose when to attend scheduled class sessions in-person or watch recorded class items online with this format. There are no required campus meetings nor synchronous virtual meeting times. However, students are highly encouraged to attend in-person sessions when possible. A more comprehensive discussion will be held during the in-person class sessions. Students will receive course content via the college Learning Management System (LMS), Brightspace. There may be links inside BrightSpace to outside resources such as Cengage, TestOut, or other instructional sites. Course communications will happen through college email, Announcements in BrightSpace, and posts in the weekly Content portion of BrightSpace. There is course-specific software you will need to be able to run. Some of the software will require additional system (computer) resources such as Random Access Memory (RAM). You will be required to have access to reliable internet. If you do not have the appropriate system requirements, you will have to schedule a time to come to campus to utilize the college computer lab.
